

The National Family Planning Board Library – A Critical Resource for Reproductive Health Issues

The National Family Planning Board (NFPB), empowered by the 1970 National Family Planning Act, is the agency of Government responsible for preparing, carrying out and promoting sustainable family planning services in Jamaica.

The organisation is guided by a mission “to play a leading role in identifying, developing, promoting and co-ordinating national policies and programmes that recognize the rights of the individual to high quality Family Planning services appropriate to their Reproductive Health needs and status, in keeping with Government objectives and the international environment.”

The Role of Library in Fulfilling NFPB’s Mission

The Board maintains a staffed special library where the public and members of staff can access information pertaining to reproductive health including, child abuse, teenage pregnancy, maternal and child health, drug abuse, puberty, menstruation, parenting and family planning options on which a wealth of information can be found in various books, journals and other publications. The philosophy that underpins the operation of the library is one which sees information as an important empowering tool. Explained further, this empowerment promotes self awareness which fosters proactive action on the part of individuals to avert the dangers of risky sexual lifestyles, practices and behaviours.

Benefits to the Public

Youth of all ages are invited to come in at their leisure to conduct research on school - related projects or learn more about reproductive health matters that affect their well-being. Guidance Counselors of schools and health practitioners of health facilities and hospitals across the island may find the resources helpful tools for their jobs, thereby broadening the scope of their knowledge on specific issues and applications to the workplaces and communities in which they serve.
